Just one question, is it safe to use these keys in production? Just wondering what would happen if a key suddenly stopped working, like getting banned by VMware.

I have the same question... I use KVM here... buuut, I want to test... I think just block the esxi hosts in the firewall...

no worries even it will work without internet you can diable internet for esxi and vcenter

How do I disable esxi internet? I tried putting a fake gateway but it didn't accept it, and I can't even leave the gateway blank.

The easiest way to do that, is to block the host in your (physical) firewall oder modem of your provider, just take a look if it says "block devices" or so, somewhere. For the firewall it would be a bit more complex, but still possible.

Hi there, this page needs a password now, does anyone have it? Thanks.

Changeling Basis-Auth User/Pass gives this message :)

You may try using FTP with E-Mail as password, they say. And I can approve FTP works (keep username empty):

<ftp://cios.dhitechnical.com>

Contact webmaster@dhitechnical.com for user/pass for this site.

Or you may use anonymous FTP, with your email as the password

If you don't want to wait for email, login details are in the source code to this page

You're doing God's own work here! Broadcom would rather a client be down until their phone support starts Monday morning.

It's only too easy to sell other solutions after crap like this >.>

We are still here, just a bit more private

Contact webmaster@dhitechnical.com for user/pass for this site.

Or you may use anonymous FTP, with your email as the password

If you don't want to wait for email, login details are in the source code to this page

From the source code

| <!-- Username: cios -->

| <!-- Password: cios -->

| <!-- FTP User: anonymous -->

| <!-- FTP Password: anyvalid@emailaddress.com-->

| <!-- Any valid email address will work for the FTP password. -->

So the username is cios and the password is cios
